this vivid description of that heroic charge and more than heroic repulse, written by one who which it had its birth and by the nurture of which its stars have comes to hauch to outbuilber its original stripes. Shall that flag, which has gathered tresh giory in every war and become more radiant still by the conquest of peace—shall that flag now be form by the conquest of peace—shall that flag now be form by demostic faction and trodden in the dust by sectional rivalry? Shall we of the Fouth, who have sharred equally with you all your folls, all your damers, all your advernables, and who countly rejoner is your advernables, and who countly rejoner is your poor erity and your fare—shall we be desired those benefits guaranteed by our countest or gathered has and, as best we may, meliate that we should assert them, and, as best we may, meliate that which we would not surrender without losing your respect as well as our own.

A birrade of lancers 1.000 strong were seen approaching at a very contrainant down out.

In that last sentence Mr. Davis merely asserted the doctrine of 1708-0 and of the Virginia and described by the Flevated Railroad and Madhon avenue ing spectacle, but not a man update of the doctrine of 1708-0 and of the Virginia Resolutions. It was the extreme State of the very seined and heating and leading that conscious that the eye of the army was upon them, that the boner of Mississippi was a state, and
